

Plan 24-30 has Route Maps to keep the promise across five foundations, including:

voice

Documenting decisions

Participation and engagement

Listening

Children must be listened to.

That means they should be meaningfully and appropriately involved when decisions are made about their care.

And it means everyone involved in their care should listen properly to them, and respond to what they want and need.

Scotland's culture of decision-making must be compassionate and caring. It must be focused on children, and those they trust.
